"Danger, Will Robinson, Danger!!!"

Color! Colour! Farben! That's right, we've been talking about it for three years, and in your hands you hold the first color issue of Casket Works! Well, sort of. The cover is in color. And as an added bonus, if you put on a pair of 3-D glasses (do they still make those?), you'll be able to see the secret message we've imbedded into the cover art. Look closely...

2002 looks like it's going to be a great year for Reaper. CAV is going strong, the Dark Heaven Legends line of role-playing products is finally underway and see the Dead Stuff section for the scoop on a new line of miniatures due out this summer. In addition, the Pro-Paint line of professional paints will grow, providing you with an even wider choice of colors for your painting palette.

As I write this, we're on the edge of March, the month when spring officially begins. The ice and snow begins to melt, flowers bloom and college students begin their annual migration to warmer climes for breeding season, colloquially known as Spring Break 'round these parts.

I get a little irritated when I think about Spring Break. And for good reason too. Like, for example, during mid-March MTV stops playing videos and all they schedule for programming is "Spring Break Beach Party" with N'Sync or whatever. I mean, what about videos? I can't stand a full week of going without videos 24/7. Oh, wait a minute. I forgot that we were talking about MTV here. God forbid they actually play VIDEOS!

Anyways, back to the Spring Break Hornathon. It's like they're rubbing it in your face, y'know, like, "Whoo Hoo! We're broadcasting live from Daytona Beach, living it up, having wild parties and contests that involve co-eds relieving themselves of various pieces of clothing. And you? You're watching freakin' TV! Loser!!" Hey! Don't remind me, okay!?

Bitter? Who, me? Hell yes! You better believe it buster! When I was in college, my Spring Break consisted of bearing distorted socio-political mores and ineffectual ethics placed on the shoulders of Generation X by the reticent and apathetic attitudes of the Baby Boomers. So there! No wet T-shirts for my generation!

I wonder how much airfare is to Daytona this time of year?

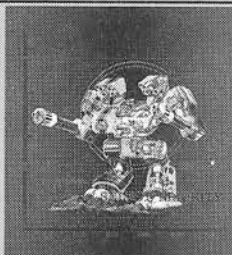

Have a great spring!

Reaper Miniatures is here for people who love gaming. Our catalog is aimed at people with a love of miniatures, and a passion for gaming. Our goal is to stroke our egos and at the same time be innovative in the gaming industry. We love to have fun, create new things, push ourselves, make great figures and embarrass the other companies with what we can do.

CAV News

Hot on the heels of success from the sold-out first printing of the CAV rulebook, we're getting ready to release the CAV Journal of Recognition and the novella The Big Dance by Matt Forbeck. It's red hot sci-fi action on a scale on the CAV universe can bring you!

Who the Heck is That?

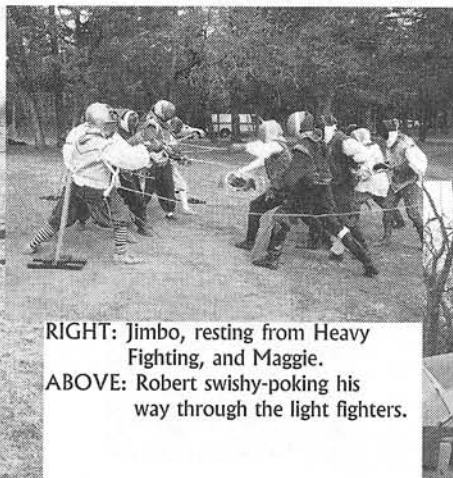

Take a look at the credits page. There you'll see a list of all the kind folks who work at Reaper, from our sculptors all the way to our lowly graphics people (Bah! Peons!). Now look to the right of their names. There you'll see a list of aliases, some obvious names well known to you, the intrepid reader. However, some are not quite so obvious. Your task: be one of the first three people to email reaperron@aol.com with the correct name of the science-fiction movie(s) that each of these characters appears in and you'll win a free Kaladrax boxed set! Former Reaper employees not eligible to win.

REAPER + LAS VEGAS = GAMA!

Reaper will be attending the Game Manufacturers Association of America in Las Vegas, Nevada at the Orleans hotel and casino. The GAMA trade show is a great opportunity for retail storeowners and employees to come out and chew the fat with their favorite game manufacturers — like us! Not to fear though, all you non-retailers can catch us this summer at both Origins in Columbus, Ohio and at Gen Con in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

What do ya' MEAN "it's just a game"?

Here at Reaper, some people like to take work home with them... and then some. Here are a few pics of what we do with our spare time...

BELOW: Robert, Kevin, and one of their friends...

MINIATURES COMING SOON

This June, Reaper will be releasing its new line of fantasy figures – Warlord! These 25mm Heroic Scale miniatures will be sculpted by the finest artists in the industry, including your favorites such as Werner Klocke, Sandra Garrity, Jason Wiebe, Dennis Mize, Ben Siens, Bob Ridolfi and others.

“The Warlord line will be different from the Dark Heaven line in a couple of ways,” says Miniatures Demigod Ron Hawkins. “The first and most obvious thing is that they’re on textured, metal slotted bases. Secondly, they’ll be more exaggerated, more over the top.” Ron is quick to nix rumors about Dark Heaven taking a back seat to the new line. “Dark Heaven isn’t going anywhere,” he adds. “Dark Heaven will continue to grow with more quality figures. If you’ll allow me a strange analogy, Dark Heaven is Posh Spice – classy and elegant. Warlord is more like Ginger Spice – a little more edgy and hip.”

It's Never Too Late to Give!

It's been nearly six months since the tragedies of September 11, 2001, but that doesn't mean it's too late to help the victims. Flip to the back cover to see a color picture of Magnus, Wizard of Hope. Sculptor Werner Klocke has graciously donated his time and sculpting talent so that we might donate the profits from this miniature's sales to charity. For $3.99, you get a beautiful miniature and at the same time you're giving to a great cause.

BABE WATCH

We figured we'd try something a little different this month, so in honor of our sci-fi theme we're gonna look at who will play our favorite CAV chick Dana Murphy! Listed below are the actresses in the front running for Dana in the upcoming CAV motion picture, due out in theatres soon.

Yeah, right...

First nominee is Sandra Bullock. Miss Congeniality has several qualities that make her a prime candidate – she's smart, she doesn't take any crap and she's a babe! If we can just talk her out of making any more Speed movies we'll be in good shape.

Next, let's take a look at Thora Birch. She might be more sultry than our perky Dana, but hey, it's called acting for a reason! Thora's an up and coming actress and that she starred in she's bound to hit the big time. We won't hold it against her that she starred in Dungeons & Dragons.

Dishonorable Mention goes to Winona Ryder. We were considering her for the part of Dana Murphy, but she's got too many strikes against her. The last straw came when we caught her trying to shoplift $8000 worth of Reaper Miniatures from a Beverly Hills boutique. Dang, Winona, have things gotten that bad?

GUARDIANS OF THE HEAVENS

By Robert E Allen III / Figures Sculpted by Sandra Garrity / Figures Painted by Alex Glocka

The attack on the small town was a slaughter from the beginning. The few able-bodied men who had not been called to serve in the Ritterlich Overlord's armies provided little resistance to the forces of Skalathrix, the Demon Prince. His hordlings barely had time to enjoy themselves as they tore the men to pieces. And then they began fighting over those pieces.

Skalathrix' demon bodyguards wandered the village buildings, looking for more prey. They found nothing but empty houses and shops. They callously set fire to each, and continued their search.

For Skalathrix himself, greater sport was necessary. He walked into the town hall and discovered what he was looking for. He favored the screams of a woman, and had found a pair of armored warriors attempting to defend the very old and very young members of the town. It was almost a touching sight, if a fiend like Skalathrix could be touched by such a base emotion.

He toyed with the pair. Allowed them to think, for a few brief moments, that perhaps their skill at arms might allow them to fend off a powerful demon like Skalathrix. He feinted his sword attacks at them, and even made it appear that he was breathing heavy – as if a demon needed air! – like they were.

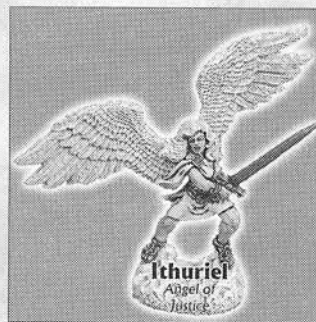

But eventually, the thrill of appearing as a weak hordling wore off, and he ended the combat with a deft swipe of his screaming blade – instantly ending the lives of the would-be defenders.

Just as Skalathrix was about to delve himself into the true joys that he sought, he heard several screeches from his hordlings outside. He would have ignored them had it not been for the sound of the clash of arms that followed. Skalathrix stepped out of the town hall to learn what this interruption was.

A band of angels, shining a blinding light, had descended from above upon his forces. The hordlings themselves were eradicated almost instantly under the attacks of a pair of angels, their furious swords ablaze. His bodyguards faced a pair of angels that were quickly gaining the upper hand in their combat. A fifth angel, whom Skalathrix recognized as Achiah the Lawgiver, was praying aloud – casting a spell, most likely. Skalathrix cursed a curse not muttered in over a thousand years. They had found him. He knew what came next.

Angels (a term used to describe various celestial beings) are the protectors of the Plane of Life. They serve as vassals of the gods, although the gods did not create them – they have simply existed for as long as the Plane of Life has, created as a race of caretakers for it.

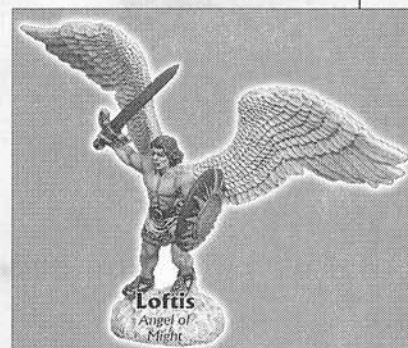

The prime task that angels fulfill is protecting the Plane of Life from encroachment from beings from other planes of existence. In particular, the angels have long been at war with the demons and devils that infest the Planes of Death. In many ways, the two are polar opposites, and whenever they encounter one another, it always ends in violence.

Because the angels have such a large amount of territory to protect, they cannot be in all places at once. Each world in the Plane of Life has its own defenders, and they strive tirelessly to protect their individual worlds from the predations of extra-planar enemies. The number of defenders for a given world is highly dependant upon what sort of interest it has garnered from the Planes of Death. In the case of Avalorr, there are perhaps a score of angels that protect it.

In addition the threat that infernal beings pose to Adon, the angels must also fight against the Dire-dead and the vampires. Both originate from the Planes of Death, and each is a threat to the Plane of Life. The vampires, luckily, have learned to hide from the angels and their minions, for individually they stand little chance against the awesome powers an angel. The Dire-dead, on the other hand, rely on their massive strength of numbers to defy the angels. Angels can successfully pick off lone Dire-dead, but against the massive armies raised by the Reapers, the angels have only been able to bide their time. If the Dire-dead threat grows much larger on Adon, then the angels are going to be forced to take some action. They simply do not have the numbers to stop the Reapers.

In battle, an angel is a terrible thing to behold. Their beautiful appearance is starkly contrasted with their cold fury and incredible proficiency with their awe-inspiring weapons. An individual angel is equal to twenty or more men. Working in concert with the rest of his or her band, they become an army of righteousness.

Despite their goal of protecting the Plane of Life, the angels take no side between the armies of Adon. The rampage of orcs, the raids of Malvern's and the cruelties that occur in Taltos are nothing to them – their sole concern is against those beings that do not belong upon the Plane of Life. They make no communication with those peoples whom they save from demons or Dire-dead. They swoop in, clash and routinely defeat their foes, and are quickly gone again.

On occasions an angel will serve as the messenger of a deity. These times of great need are attended with the usual angel speed – they arrive, deliver their message, and are off. The angels treat their assigned task with reverence, but they do not dally—there is always great work to be done.

Reaper Movie Review

It's time for another Reaper Movie Review! This issue, we review the blockbuster film The Lord of the Rings!

Tim – "When I was a kid I wanted to grow up and be Strider. Now that I'm an adult, I still want to be Strider!" A+

Gary – "Extremely fair representation of the book; kick ass Balrog!" A-

Ed – "Everyone should have Ring Wraiths chasing them at one point in time in their lives." A-

James – "Visually stunning!" A+

Al – "Excellent character representation by the actors." A

Dave – "Good, but not as good as Bored of the Rings." A+

Heather – "Why didn't it just keep going? Everybody wanted it to keep going! It should have kept GOING!!!" A+

Ron – "What an intense movie! I was really upset when Piggy died though, and the chaos that gripped the island...oh, wait. That was Lord of the Flies. Nevermind." A++

CAV

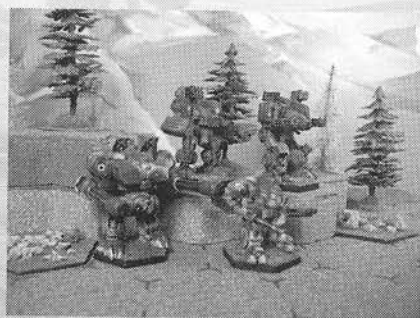

PRIMER

Sergeant Barkley hunkered down in his foxhole and looked around at the faces around him. Most of the other soldiers around him were young – teenage boys – and green. Nonetheless, they were just as anxious as he was to accomplish their mission.

The faint whine of bellar joints got his attention. He stood peeked over the rim of his hole again and scanned the horizon with his electro-binoculars. At first he saw nothing, but he switched over to infrared and immediately saw the unmistakable silhouette of a smallish scout CAV – a Panther. It was about 50 meters away, but it was moving rapidly towards their position.

Barkley shouldered his hornet rpg and took aim at the advancing CAV. Heavily armored, the Panther was a tough foe. His first shot would be his best one, and he probably wouldn't have a chance for a second if he missed or if the grenade bounced off the Panther's hull.

Barkley flipped the site up on the tube and carefully squeezed the trigger...

CAV is an exciting new tabletop miniatures game that allows you to take command of the most deadly weapon in the universe – the Combat Assault Vehicle. In addition to the CAVs, players' other ground forces include the rugged Lance tank and various infantry types. Players also control forces in the air, such as the mobile and versatile Kikyu attack aircraft. By using all of the various troops and vehicles at your disposal, you too can dominate your opponent and control the battlefields of the far future of the 23rd Century.

Those same battlefields of the future are fought over by various galactic empires, from the Adon Economic Community to the militaristic Rach to the gothic dogma of the Empire of Malverniss.

As a player, you can choose to build your CAV force from any of the listed powers in the CAV rulebook.

You can further develop your own CAV force by selecting the models that fit your style of play. If you want a force that's fast, then choose the lighter, faster CAVs and aircraft. If you want brute strength to crush the other players, then choose battlefield superiority CAVs. No matter what your style is, CAV has the models to fit you to a "t".

One unique feature of CAV is your ability to upgrade your models once you've chosen your force. Want extra firepower for your Dictator CAV? You can upgrade to the Maxim One rotary cannon. Want more

SOPHIE SPEAKS!

At long last, we are proud to bring you...well, maybe we should hold up on that part until after this interview. Anyway, here's the first ever Reaper interview with our very own Casket Works mascot...um, spokesperson. (Editor's note: The cub reporter from Dana Murphy's interview in CW #7 was sacked, so we're trying out a new reporter. I wash my hands of any and all hijinx that occur during this interview.)

Casket Works: Thanks for making time for this interview, Sophie. Can I call you Sophie?

Sophie: (Smiling warmly) Of course. Besides, it's next to impossible for you humans to pronounce my real name.

CW: I see. So, how long have you been with the Reaper team?

S: About three or four years now, I think. After a couple of months, time seems to become a blur around here.

CW: I'll say. Speaking of which, how old are you, anyway?

S: (Evil grin) Actually, I think I'm a little old for you.

CW: (Blushing) No, no, no! That's not what I meant!

S: Sure you didn't. Well, in July, I'll be turning a girlish 241. (Bats eyelashes)

CW: (Eyes wide)

S: Hello? You still with me? Helloooo?

CW: Uh, yeah, I'm still here. Uh, congratulations. Or something. I guess. Anyway... where was I?

S: Sounds like you're getting ready to ask me out, I think.

CW: ME?!? I mean, well... no. Not at all. Really. (Flustered) So, you're, um, a succubus, right?

S: That's me. Fluttery wings, denizen of evil, all that business. (Laughs) Seriously, though, that kind of thing is a bit overrated. Since I've been hanging out with Sir Falco, I've considered myself much more of a "mischievous flirt adept"... wouldn't you agree?

CW: (Blushing fiercely) I would say. Is it hot in here or is it just me? Anyways, you've been hanging out with Falco Steelcross? A paladin and a succubus? Oh, I mean "flirt adept". Kind of an odd couple, innit?

S: (Laughing) Oh, no, no. Nothing like that. Strictly drinking buddies. Don't worry, ladies — he's still very available.

CW: Ah, that's a relief. You know, fraternizing with co-workers and such...

S: (Blinking innocently) Is that a problem?

CW: No! Not at all! I mean... So, who do you most admire?

S: Oh, that's an easy one. My mom, because she's just the greatest. Leo DaVinci pretty much rocked, too. Such a sad life. And I like Britney Spears.

CW: Pardon?

S: Just kidding. She might invent a flying machine or something, though — she's still young.

CW: Good point. Any plans for the future?

S: Maybe someday, I'll open a finishing school for promising young succubi — I mean, ladies. Possibly teach martial arts on the side. And raise ponies.

Definitely ponies. Of course, I have no real plans for... oh, say the rest of the afternoon or evening...

CW: Sophie! Hey, are you asking me out?

S: (Evil grin) You know any good Italian restaurants around here?

CW: Maybe. Would that be considered "fraternizing"?

S: Drinking buddies. Strictly drinking buddies. Now put your pen down, silly.

If you have questions about the meaning of life or miniatures.
